The Latest Styles From New York City

(By Florence Fairbanks)
New York, Feb. 23.—Flowing draperies are the keynote of present day fashion, at least so far as the more elaborate costumes are concerned. The shops display a large variety of the most beautiful materials which lend themselves admirably to achieving this effect and, at the same time wonderfully enhance the general effect by the richness of their texture and the artistic charm of their coloring.

While the one-piece or princess gown is by no means a thing of the past, a very effective mode which is among the novelties certain of success is the separate waist, of more or less elaboration, with skirt to match, so far as material goes. The waist is draped or worn as a foundation to an overblouse of chiffon, net, silk muslin or similar fabrics, this being usually of a contrasting color, some of the loveliest of these garments having the outer blouse not only of a contrasting color, but showing a printed pattern as well, or an all-over design of embroidery or sequins. Another variation makes the under waist of the figured material, while the veiling is plain. Black chiffon or net is much used for these veiled effects, more frequently over color than over white, although the magpie combination is capable of stunning results when worked out by a master's hand.

In spangled fabrics the manufacturers have surpassed themselves in striving to give what will be most beautiful for the veiling fad. White or palest blue messaline de sole shows a pattern border worked out with moonlight paillettes. Iridescent spangles, brilliant as the plumage of tropical birds gleam on bronze chiffon, which is to be draped over amber satin. Those who do not care for glitter, may find many handsome embroidered novelties of the semi-transparent order.

Almost barbarous splendor characterizes the trimmings for evening costumes offered in the fashionable shops. Very open-patterned lace banding on the flit order has gold and silver threads run in it, then some of the pattern worked over in a kind of coarse satin stitch, with fiber floss. Gold tubular cord will outline a Greek key design on white net to be applied on white crepe or chiffon. An odd and very effective banding shows a narrow line of black running in and out of the delicate pastel tints of the Persian leaves worked on net. Fringe of glass, metal or pearl beads, ranging in size from pin heads to peas, drops from some of the girdles, reading well over the hips, or when forming only a trimming for the front falls nearly to the knees. In fact, fringe of this glittering kind is worked in on the evening gown wherever there is an excuse for it, and especially lovely does it look falling away from the sleeveless armhole and forming a twinkling background for a beautifully modelled arm.

The side trimming, which has come back with the Russian styles, appears on evening costumes worked out with spangled or embroidered banding, or by embroidery or applique on the costume itself. Another dainty fad is the embroidering or applique of one or two huge blossoms on the left breast, another appearing near the foot of the skirt, as if it had fallen from the upper cluster.

There is no longer any doubt that fashion for the coming season will demand a defined waist line, outlined one way or another. For every day wear the belt, of whatever material is preferred, will attend to this duty, but for dressy occasions jeweled cinchures will be used, sparkling with gold and silver, and genuine or imitation gems of various colors; or else a seemingly soft but in reality cleverly boned, silken girdle or folded sash form the connecting link between bodice and skirt. Whichever be used, it will frequently have dangling ends, many or only two at the back, or a very long and broad one at the left side. Sometimes three-inch ribbon will form long loops, terminating in a soft large rosette attached to the skirt near the foot. Or the ends to a girdle will be made of lined and slightly stiffened satin, finished with beads or silken tassels, or it may be the entire end will be worked with spangles or beads and form a glittering line of light from waistline to foot.

Closely akin to the girdle is the broad tunic, either forming a deep point back and front with a slight upward curve over the hips, or front and back and at the sides, but between these points panels of glitter falling to the knees. Waist garniture to match are almost invariably worn with these tunics, and, made of jet beads, they look exceedingly smart if worn with a costume of delicate color, veiled with colored or black chiffon. For white costumes come gold or silver bead waist garniture and tunics. Indeed, the tunic is usually a graduated bead fringe.

The constant changes in fashion affect not only the styles for grown up women, but also those for young girls of school age. Fortunately, however, the changes in the fashion for school girls are not as great and material as in former spring seasons. In separate waists, for instance, the regulation model fastening down the front, with a full plaited frill and long, comparatively tight sleeves, the whole relieved with plain bands of lace or embroidered lawn, will still be worn. The newest models, however, show a wide shoulder line, somewhat suggesting the Gibson model, so run to the ground a few years back. These newest waists show the shoulder plait tapering to the waist line, which, now returned to its normal position, is of noticeably smaller dimensions than during the reign of the Empire gown. Small waists are, however, not at all in fashion and it is to be hoped their vogue will never again return.

Another marked change is that produced by the introduction of the double puff or "buffon" sleeve. As yet this sleeve is small in width and short in length above a deep cuff, but there is no forecasting to what dimensions the design may attain in the course of the next few months.

For quite young girls suspender and strap dresses are still worn, but the little gowns throughout, with a small yoke and collar of white to keep the dark color of the gown from the face, are unquestionably smartest. Instead of being made on any lining, the waist of the gown, which is made with sleeves and all in one, may be worn over a lawn guimp, showing yoke, collar and cuffs of tucked net that can be washed and changed each day if necessary.

Napoleon hats are more than ever popular and during the coming weeks the leading milliners will bring out several new varieties of this shape, which is so eminently becoming to youthful faces. Now, that the hair is worn so low, the Napoleon necessarily comes well over the brow, but the position of the points of the tricorn depends wholly upon the shape of the face beneath it.

Women who appreciate the softening effect to the face of a velvet-lined hat brim are hailing with delight the return of that fashion of a former decade. It applies, of course, to the shapes which have an upward flare, and especially to the Napoleon, which is at least at its jauntiest when developed in blue, green or black chip with a velvet-faced brim. The popular leghorns also show to best advantage when faced with black velvet, unless a very summery effect is desired. Rose garlands are a prominent feature among the spring hat trimmings.

Many Ohio Tourists Are Now In Florida

St. Petersburg, Fla., Feb. 13.
Editor Banner:

I am very comfortably located at the Central Hotel on Second street North. Its wide and extensive verandas afford ample accommodation to loaf and smoke.

This city is located on Tampa Bay, a very fine sheet of water, and many places of interest may be visited by boats that leave here at small cost. Tampa is 22 miles across the bay and at this time while the fair is in progress over there, 75 cents pays for a round trip ticket. The street car pier and the railroad pier extend out in the bay a short mile. The city is full of tourists. They say at least 6,000 are stopping here and they come from almost any state that you may mention.

Oh, me! Oh, my!
Ohio leads the procession with over 500 registered at Ohio headquarters. This is Ohio Day and we have a picnic at the Old Fort some 20 miles down the bay.

Tourists throng the piers that afford ample space and fine accommodation for those that enjoy fishing. "Sure I do." That is a common expression that you hear down here. The first fish I caught was a flounder and a lady wanted to buy it, but I had given it away. They are considered very fine fish to eat.

I was down to Passagrill the other day. It is some seven miles by trolley and five miles sail across the bay. It was a fine day and I enjoyed the sail very much. These promoters have a town laid out and advertise a sale of lots on the trolley line some five miles out. It is a shame to take the money. There is nothing there but sand and that is very cheap in Florida. I presume they bought the land at from one to four dollars per acre, and I pity the people who buy the lots. There is a limited amount of muck and near this city and that is the only land I would want to own in Florida. They ask all it is worth and it costs from $25 to $50 an acre to prepare it for truck farming.

This is in the midst of the orange picking season and when you get them fresh from the grove they are fine. The crop is not equal in quantity to last year's, yet I think the fruit is quite as good.

A. W. Lamar, D. D., of Nashville, Tenn., was at our hotel for a week. He conducted evangelistic services at the Baptist Temple here. Many may remember him, as he lectured at the Baptist Assembly at Hlawatha park some years ago.

Mr. Doolittle and wife from good old Tennessee called on me yesterday and I enjoyed their call very much. The Buckeyes are welcomed everywhere and especially those that come from good old Knox.

Very truly,
ROBERT S. HULL.

ELK

Lodge To Be Instituted In Gallion, O.

(Mt. Gilead Register)
At a meeting of the Bucyrus lodge of Elks, held Thursday evening, a petition was presented by a number of Gallion Elks for the establishment of a lodge of Elks in that city. The petition was approved by the Bucyrus lodge which means that a new lodge will be instituted at Gallion some time in the near future. There are many Elks in Mt. Gilead who express themselves as being delighted at the prospect of having an Elk lodge located in Gallion as it will be much more convenient for them to attend meetings there, if they are able to transfer their membership from Marion, where they now belong, to Gallion. To attend a meeting at Marion much inconvenience is experienced, but if they held membership in Gallion the railroad accommodations are such as to make the trip to that place as easy one.

DEAFNESS CANNOT BE CURED

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result. And unless the inflammation can be taken out this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars free.

ARREST

Of S. A. Renner In The City Of Cleveland

Wanted Here On Charge Of Non-Support

Humane Officer Lybarger left Wednesday morning for Cleveland, where he has located S. A. Renner, for whom a warrant had been sworn out by his wife, charging him with non-support. Several weeks ago Renner was confronted by the humane officer on the same charge and had agreed to pay at least two dollars each week for the partial support of his wife. This he did for some time and then went to Akron where he said he would be able to secure more work. After he left, no word or money was received from him and on investigation, it was found that he was in Cleveland. The authorities were notified in that city and Tuesday a telephone message was received by Mr. Lybarger, stating that his man was in custody and that he should come after him.

FORMER

Wife Of Guiteau Dies In Colorado

Denver, Colo., Feb. 23.—Mrs. Mena Given, who died here today, is believed to have been the divorced wife of Charles Guiteau, the assassin of President Garfield.

Soon after the president was shot it was reported here that Mrs. Given, who was then in the restaurant business, had been the wife of the slayer.

Scores of newspaper men visited her and endeavored to get facts, but she had only one answer: "I have nothing to say."

She would not admit that she knew Guiteau nor would she deny knowing him, simply refusing to commit herself in any way.

She made money and was popular, but for the last few years had been living at a mountain summer resort. She fell on a staidway there Sunday night, fracturing her skull, and was brought to a hospital, where she died today.

A man isn't necessarily conservative because he's slow.
